Hello good friend.

Were you able to watch General Conference last week?

So many good messages!

Of course, our prophet, President Nelson, had some key counsel for us about removing the conflict in our lives and forgiving someone before Easter. Plus, our wonderful 12 apostles shared milestone talks.

But there were others who also made an impact on me with their super insightful messages.

I really enjoyed Sister Reyna Aburto's talk about how we, the members, are the church, and how the structure allows us to have amazing spiritual experiences through service to each other. Listen or read it here:

I was also moved by Sister Amy Wright's message about how Christ can heal all that is broken in our lives, even broken relationships, especially our relationship with Him. Read or listen to her message here:

One of the themes that seemed to keep surfacing was the importance of our missionaries and how critical it is to prepare and serve if you are able. President Nelson said that the gospel of Jesus Christ is the only enduring solution for peace, so we need more missionaries to bring our message of peace to the world more than ever.

There's so much to review and learn more deeply from conference that I'm going to make my email short today so you can spend time reading a conference talk instead. They are now all located in the Gospel Library app:

Pick any one and start reading. General Conference is our modern-day scripture. It's what the Lord wants us to hear today. Each one of the speakers prayed earnestly about what they should say and were then inspired to give their specific message. It's our duty and privilege to study them.

I'm so thankful for General Conference, and you.

Take care.
